Although she was offered a position at Los Alamos National Laboratory, Bev, who had worked in radio in her hometown of Fort Dodge, Iowa, accepted a job at KRSN in 1953.

A mom who stayed home to raise her four children, Bev soon found herself volunteering for numerous tasks at Immaculate Heart of Mary Catholic Church, where she served as president of IHM's Altar and Rosary Society.

Asked to conduct the local blood drive, Bev and her helpers made sure that folks from the Hill, took time out to give blood, an effort she coordinated for fifteen years. When Los Alamos received the President's Honor Award, Bev traveled to Fort Worth, Texas to accept the honor.

"Volunteering requires a lot of hours," she said. "It's a lot of work if it's done right, and you still have to call upon many people to help you."
